

RIGHT TO WORK IS WRONG FOR EVERYONE

False Claims, False Promises: Why “Right to Work” Is Wrong for Everyone

Across the country, workers are facing a barrage of legislative attacks on their rights to form unions and bargain collectively, including so-called right-to-work legislation. Right-to-work laws make it optional for workers covered by a union contract to help pay for the expenses that the union incurs while protecting the rights of all employees. Contrary to claims from its supporters, right to work offers no protection or economic benefits for workers. In fact, studies show that these deceptively titled laws drive down wages, benefits, and overall living standards for everyone. And research reveals that right-to-work laws do not create jobs or improve a state’s business climate.

Read on to learn why right to work is wrong for workers, businesses, and our economy.

Wrong for workers

These laws drive down wages for all workers, including non-union members, women, and people of color. Workers living in right-to-work states earn about $1,500 less per year than workers in states without these laws. The wage penalty is even higher for women and workers of color.

Workers in right-to-work states are less likely to have health insurance. The rate of employer-sponsored health insurance for workers in right-to-work states is 2.6 percentage points lower than in states without these restrictions.

Right to work makes workplaces more dangerous. According to data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the rate of workplace deaths is higher in right-to-work states.

Right-to-work proponents are wrong

Right-to-work supporters falsely claim that right to work protects workers who don’t want to join a union or disagree with a union’s politics. But federal labor law already protects workers who don’t want to join a union or make political contributions.

Right to work’s true purpose is to hurt the ability of unions to advocate for all workers and serve as a check on corporate greed.
